

DWF Risk assists businesses in creating and maintaining COVID resilient workplaces

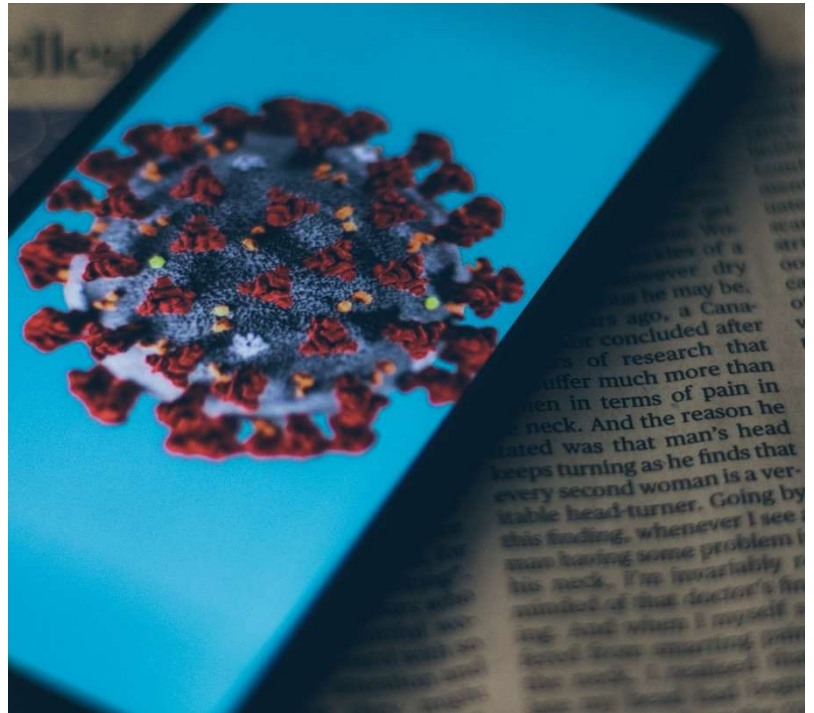

Background

The COVID-19 pandemic has changed the way businesses and workplaces operate in Australia and across the globe, and it is now a legal requirement for most Australian businesses to have some form of COVID Safe Plan in place to continue operating. It is crucial for businesses to understand the steps that they need to take to comply with the relevant public health orders and directions in their state or territory, as well as their work health and safety legislative obligations.

The situation

As a result of this, DWF Risk has been engaged to assist a number of businesses across Australia who operate in a range of industries and sectors to prepare COVID Safe Plans, and to create and maintain COVID resilient workplaces.

How we helped

The services DWF Risk have provided to businesses include:

- preparing COVID Safe Plans for businesses with several offices / locations, who operate across a number of Australian states and territories;
- reviewing existing COVID Safe Plans, and working with businesses to update plans in order to meet legislative compliance;
- reviewing relevant public health orders and directions for different Australian states and territories, and providing regular advice and guidance to assist businesses to meet these obligations; and
- assisting businesses to implement practical solutions to stop the spread and mitigate the risk of COVID in their workplace (e.g. what to do if a worker develops symptoms, managing a COVID-19 positive case, what records to keep, managing vulnerable workers, what information and guidance to provide to workers).

If your business needs assistance to create and maintain a COVID resilient workplace, or to maintain legislative compliance, please contact us below.
